Research leadership and supervision

2008–2011 the project Constructing Gender in Children's Cultures, based at the School of Arts /Women's Studies of the University of Turku, led by Taru Leppänen PhD and financed by the Academy of Finland. Position: Senior researcher, research manager. Additional duties: Writing of the research plan in the successful project application; supervision of doctoral students Reeli Karimäki and Karoliina Ojanen.

2004–2006 the project Gender Narrated in Speech and Deed, based at the Institute of Cultural Research of the University of Helsinki and financed by the Academy of Finland. Position: Project leader, researcher. Duties: Writing of the successful funding application to the Academy of Finland. Personnel and research management and financial administration of the research funds EUR 241.300. In sheer numbers (as reported to the Academy of Finland), the three-year project led by me produced 31 scientific articles, 31 other scientific publications, four books (of which one the doctoral dissertation of Anna Anttila), 30 papers presented in scientific congresses and 41 items of public information on the research, by the four researchers involved.

Supervised doctoral dissertations

Kirsi Törmi, Doctor of Arts (Dance), 2016, subject of doctoral thesis: choreographic process as interaction. Supervisor between 2012 and 2016.

Anna Anttila PhD, 2009, subject of doctoral thesis: romantic culture of preadolescents. Supervisor between 2004 and 2009.

2001, 5 March. In the application procedure for office of adjunct professor of folkloristics, University of Helsinki, demonstration lecture approved and academic teaching skills found good, by the nomination committee.

Training

Spring term of 1979, I attended the course (18 h) for small group leaders (tutor), organised by the University of Helsinki. Autumn term 1979, I practised by leading a small group of first-year students. Certificate by the University of Helsinki, 1.11.1979.

Lecturing experience, total 307 hours, since 1987, as visiting or temporary lecturer.

The most recent lectures and courses include:

University of the Arts, Sibelius Academy Kuopio, Popular music as experiences of the listeners, 2 h, Studia generalia On the Edges of Music, spring term 2016;

University of the Arts, Theatre Academy Helsinki, Ethnography II (graduate level), 18 h, spring term 2013;

The National Graduate School of Music, Ethnography (graduate level), 7 h, autumn 2012;

Theatre Academy Helsinki, Ethnography (graduate level), 14 h, 3 supervised essays, autumn 2011;

Theatre Academy Helsinki, Narrative performance studies (graduate level), 2 h, spring 2011.

Leading of a Girls' Studies seminar. Between 1996 and 2008, I led a Girls' Studies seminar, attended by students and researchers of different disciplines of the humanities and social sciences of the University of Helsinki. The seminar met on a monthly basis to discuss participants' papers and presentations (usually ten meetings per academic year, circa 120 meetings of two to three hours altogether). Three Academy of Finland projects recruited their researchers from among the participants: Changing Models of Girls' Cultures, 1998–2001, led by Professor Satu Apo; Gender Narrated in Speech and Deed, 2004–2006, led by me; and Gender in Children's Culture, 2008–2011, led by Adjunct Professor Taru Leppänen. Anna Anttila and Karoliina Ojanen finished their doctoral dissertations supervised by me; Taru Leppänen, Mia Österlund and I qualified for adjunct professorship; and Hanna Väättäin successfully launched a post-doc researcher's career, working with the Girls' Studies seminar in these projects. While active in the Girls Studies Group, participants earned academic degrees as follows: Mari Hatakka MA (folkloristics), Liisa-Maria Nitovuori MA (folkloristics), Anna Anttila Lic. Phil. (folkloristics), Jaana Lähteenmaa Lic. Soc. Sc., Dr. Soc. Sc. (sociology), and Sara Routarinne PhD (Finnish).

Involvement in curriculum planning and the implementation of courses

Together with Adjunct Prof Helena Helve and Jaana Lähteenmaa Dr. Soc. Sc. I have planned and launched the youth studies modules (30 credits ECTS) at the Open University of Helsinki, in 1998, as the first higher education study modules of Youth Research in Finland, and contributed 34 hours of related teaching and supervised six seminar theses.

Merits in the training of responsible conduct of research

University of Jyväskylä, the network Children, Youth and Environments of Growth, Research ethics (graduate level), 3 h, autumn 2007.

University of Helsinki, folkloristics, Practicum on research of contemporary culture, containing a period on research ethics (intermediate & advanced levels), 20 h, spring 2002.
